Introduction

Owner - subject of both the communication process and group processes, as well as the object is, in fact, a separate person, a concrete person. Therefore, social psychology has also studied the problem of individual identity, which it considers that different social from the point of view that the participant and active implementer of processes checks. It is known that the problem of personality is both in general psychology and pedagogical in psychology, too, differential, legal psychology and a number of special ones of psychology it is also studied in sections. Each department or network has its own theme and functions from the point of view, it illuminates the problems that apply to the individual. For example, in general psychology refers to a person as a special of psychological activity, the owner of separate psychic processes considered an object of social relations, sociology considers it.

The peculiarity of the socio-psychological approach to the problem of personality is that,as a consequence of the different forms of interaction that it will have with different groups looked. That is, Social Psychology is, first of all, a person who is considered a member of a group what laws are subject to behavior, in the system of communication of an individual studies how the influences he receives are reflected in his mind. Group personality in what way does the effect on psychology occur socialization in Social Psychology when inextricably linked with the problem, the personality behavior, behavior of these influences how it manifests itself directly is associated with the problem of social guidance.These are the qualities that are formed in the individual on the basis of them and in their different types of personality by determining the manifestation, the management of personality behavior is guided by the mechanisms development is one of the main tasks of Social Psychology.

To the formation of personality psychology is a certain social to which it belongs the relationships of the groups also have their own influence. Such an interaction and in combination with the fact that in the process of communication, the influence of individuals on each other occurs,it happens that they influence society, labor, people, their own views on their personal qualities,social Masters. In a certain social environment while living, the individual gains a unique place, reputation, role there. Current on the study of personality in the field of contemporary social psychology the question of research, especially the practical tasks in this regard, is the science of Social Psychology solving on the basis of the directions of the psychological and sociological approach standing in the center is being made. For example, studying identity in America and all other Western states relatively two types of Social Psychology - "psychological social psychology" and " sociological Social Psychology " exists. While these routes are similar, they are separated from each other there are also different aspects. That is, psychological social psychology personality and activity, treatment, interpersonal relationship, socio-psychological structure of Personality, Personality social workshops that include cognitive, conative, behavioral opportunities,research on problems such as socio-spiritual experiences of the individual and the community while aiming to go, in sociological social psychology it is often analysis of social strata of society, psychology of peoples, mass phenomena special emphasis is placed on psychology, classes, groups, humanistic psychology.
